Beyond the Structure-Function Horizon of Membrane Proteins

The cell membrane (also known as the plasma membrane or cytoplasmic membrane, and historically referred to as the plasmalemma) is a biological membrane that separates the interior of all cells from the outside environment (the extracellular space). It consists of a lipid bilayer with embedded proteins. The basic function of the cell membrane is to protect the cell from its surroundings.

Structure. As seen with electron microscope, the basement membrane is composed of two layers, the basal lamina and the underlying layer of reticular connective tissue. The underlying connective tissue attaches to the basal lamina with collagen VII anchoring fibrils and fibrillin microfibrils. The two layers together are collectively referred to as the basement membrane.

At all three interfaces, the barrier function results from a combination of physical barrier (tight junctions between cells reducing flux via the intercellular cleft or paracellular pathway), transport barrier (specific transport mechanisms mediating solute flux), and metabolic barrier (enzymes metabolizing molecules in transit).
